

Kourlaba Georgia, PhD

Georgia Kourlaba is an Assistant Professor in Research Methodology and Evidence-Based Nursing at University of Peloponnese. Moreover, she is member of Public Health Expert Committee and member of the Board of Directors of the Greek National Public Health Organization. For more than 12 years, Georgia had served as biostatistician/research fellow at the Dietetics and Nutritional Science Department of Harokopio University, at the National School of Public Health, and at the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens (NKUA), gaining research experience in the design and statistical analysis of epidemiological studies, clinical trials and economic evaluation studies. Back in 2014, Georgia co-founded the non-profit civil partnership Collaborative Center for Clinical Epidemiology and Outcomes Research (CLEO) and she served as Managing Director/Associate Scientific Director till December 2020. She has been teaching “Research Methodology” and “Biostatistics” for more than 10 years in six Postgraduate Programs, all organized by Medical School of NKUA. She has published over 150 papers in international scientific journals and has received a significant number of references to her work (h-index per googlescholar: 39). She earned her MSc in Biostatistics from the NKUA and her Ph.D. in Nutritional Epidemiology-Biostatistics from Harokopio University, in Athens, Greece.